ABSTRACT

A bibliography of guidance literature published by various organizations interested in science and engineering education is contained in this booklet. Entries are grouped under the various scientific, engineering and related fields, and each includes the date of publication, author (if appropriate), price (many are free), and the address of the supplier. COMMISSION IS:

A novel career booklet to "test" a student's interests in various fields of science — chemistry, biology, mathematics, geology, physics — and engineering

This programmed booklet guides the student as he searches for science career interests. Sources of additional information are included.

Developed by scientists and educators through the Scientific Manpower Commission

A Selected Bibliography

This bibliography of guidance literature published by various organizations interested in scientific and engineering education is designed to assist young people, their parents, and their guidance counselors to obtain accurate information about careers in science and engineering. The final section lists sources of information on financial aid.

If no price is given, single copies may be obtained free of charge. Write directly to the source listed below each title. Bulk prices are available on most items.
